Abstract

Single-parent families -especially single-mom- were increasing sharply in these decades. The aim of this research was finding change that fatherless teen experienced after divorce or death of their father. Subjects in this research were 13-18 years old-junior and senior high school students from fatherless family (N = 32). Data were collected through questionnaires consisting questions about relationship with father and change after their father absent. It was found that relationship quality of parents-children is more important than family structure itself.
